Takeaway

Based on my findings, when determining the expected salary for a data analyst position, location, seniority, sector, rating of the company, and the number of years the company has been founded may be the most important features to be considered, especially location.

Recommendation

Recruiting firms or the department of Human Resources of businesses can use my models as a guide for salary benchmarking to confirm your company's compensation levels are in line with the current market, as well as to manage employees' salary expectations.

Thank You!
